MB Docket No. 07-57

I am writing to say that the Sirius XM merger should go forward. With all the competition for our attention and money, I find the satellite radio business offers the best value for the money when it comes to entertainment for the ears. Having the two companies fighting it out will have an impact on the consumers in a negative way. What will we do with a radio that can not be used because one or both companies fold?

Personally I have invested a lot of money in satellite radio equipment. Not to mention money in subscription fees that is sitting in the companies hands.

I do not see any anti compete issues here other than the NAB wanting to see these two great companies fold like a cheap suit. I see it as competition with broadcast radio not with each other. Please don't make this an issue because of Mr. Howard Stern.

Thanks and good luck to the Satellite Radio merger.
